TNVC is very proud to offer the new CADEX Fold-Away Vertical Grip! For a long time we've wanted a grip that can fold away when not needed, CADEX a major Canadian military supplier has offered just that. This unit is presently in use with the Canadian military after going through rigorous trials. As most know, we try to train hard here at TNVC with any piece of gear to see if it fits our requirements and this VG has done the job in a great way for me.

The unit features a novel fold away feature that locks in place with a simple release button located at the top of the grip. As most folks know, storing your weapon in a typical Eagle case can be tough at times with most vertical grips, let alone shooting prone. It also features a twist pull out battery compartment that holds 2 CR123 batts.

We were also impressed with the battery compartment itself that features grip stops on each end of the compartment that does not allow the batts. to move around in the compartment. They are held in tension. Also, the extraction of the compartment has a stop feature so the compartment does not fall out of the grip. A simple twist and pull cover releases the compartment with no knobs to unscrew to remove and replace OR lose! It's great to see such well thought out features such as this going into a piece of gear.
